GRADUATE LEVEL COURSES TAUGHT

Advanced Treatment Intervention (3 credits)

Taught on Online Format

This course will present advanced training in counseling approaches and techniques. Students will learn more about an integrative approach to counseling to further the development of their own personal counseling model. Students will integrate their knowledge of case conceptualization, treatment planning, and diagnosis with the practice of counseling techniques. Presentations, recorded role plays, and case studies will be utilized.

Behavioral Criminology (3 credits)

Taught on Online Format

The purpose of this course is to familiarize the student with various techniques for analyzing and understanding criminal behavior through crime and crime scene analysis. These techniques include an introduction to the fundamentals of criminal investigative analysis and profiling. Critical thinking skills will be emphasized in crime and crime scene analysis in order to draw logical inferences regarding any underlying psychopathology, motive, criminal history or other dynamics unique to that particular offender.

Case Conceptualization and Treatment Strategies (3 credits)

Taught on Main Campus and Online Formats

This course focuses on the processes of conceptualizing clinical cases from a variety of theoretical orientations and translating them into effective treatment strategies. Video and audiotape clinical interviews, case studies, and role-plays will be utilized to assist students in formulating hypotheses about client difficulties and developing appropriate clinical interventions, which address those difficulties in a culturally sensitive manner.

Counseling Internship (3 credits)

Taught on Online Format

This course is a continuation of Counseling Practicum. The student will be expected to develop more advanced skills in interviewing, assessment, and intervention. Simultaneously, continued emphasis will be placed upon ethical, legal, and professional issues.

Counseling Practicum I, II & III (3 credits each class)

Taught on Main Campus and Online Formats

The student is required to spend a specified number of hours per week at a selected agency working under supervision with clients. During that time, the student is expected to increase his or her competence in the areas of basic interviewing, assessment, and counseling skills. Furthermore, the student will be made more aware of the ethical, legal, and professional issues inherent in the counseling process.

Diagnostic Interviewing (3 credits)

Taught on Main Campus Format

This course covers theoretical and practical aspects of the clinical assessment interview. Emphasis is placed on development of communication skills, rapport building, evaluation strategies, consideration of diagnostic data, cultural and ethnic diversity, the mental status evaluation, and the ability to organize information in written and oral form.

Developmental: Child and Adolescent (1.5 credits)

Taught on Main Campus Format

This course covers issues in human development that are especially relevant to children and adolescents, beginning with the earliest aspects of development during the prenatal period and ending with the final phase of transition from adolescence to adulthood. Topics in this course will be selected that focus on normal and accelerated developmental progress, as well as factors that threaten to impede normal development.

Group Theory and Practice (3 credits)

Taught on Main Campus Format

This course addresses group theory and practice in multiple settings with a variety of diverse populations and age groups. Major themes include group dynamics, group process, and group states for mental health and school counselors.

Intensive Clinical Supervision

Taught on Main Campus and Online Format

This is a year-long (3 consecutive semesters) experience for doctoral clinical psychology students engaging in practicum training. Students are required to spend approximately one hour face to face (weekly) with a faculty member in an individual format. They are expected to present case materials and be prepared to discuss cases each week. Tapes of therapy sessions and the use of mock videos via Skillsetter may be required. During these courses, students acquire competencies in the areas of interview and assessment, psychological testing and psychotherapy.

Introduction to Mental Health Counseling Techniques (3 credits)

Taught on Main Campus Format

This course is an overview of the field of mental health counseling. Students will address professional roles, functions, credentialing, and general ethics of mental health counselors. The major focus will be on the development of fundamental counseling skills, including listening, empathy training, and basic interviewing. Issues regarding the development of the therapeutic relationship, cultural diversity, crisis intervention and response as well as mental status assessment will be covered.

Program Evaluation in Criminal Justice (3 credits)

Taught on Online Format

This course provides a fundamental analysis of research and methodology as related to evaluation of criminal justice administration. Included in this course: introduction to statistical analysis and the use of current technology

Psychological Testing for Individual Evaluation (3 credits)

Taught on Main Campus Format

This course surveys frequently used tests of aptitude, interest, and personality. Test content, purpose, psychometric properties, administration, and scoring procedures are compared and evaluated. Issues of test use with culturally diverse populations are addressed

UNDERGRADUATE LEVEL COURSE TAUGHT

First Year Seminar (3 credits)

Taught on Main Campus

This course introduces first-year students to fundamental expectations of college learning and the range of opportunities and experiences both in and outside the classroom that Nova Southeastern University provides. The course promotes a pathway to student success by fostering academic inquiry in various academic disciplines and knowledge of essential resources that facilitate a successful transition to college life. This course develops the foundation that serves as a pathway to graduation and a thriving professional career.
